DEBUT OF THE "WHAT THE HELL DID I JUST WATCH?" COMEDY VIDEO FESTIVAL

New Video Comedy Festival Will Feature Comedy Videos Without Regard To Production Value, Only Laugh Factor.

SEATTLE, Washington - June 27th, 2006 – On the night of July 11th, you'll have three options: 1) Anne Gedess art exhibit (Non-refundable), 2 Eat bon bon's and watch whatever's on Lifetime 3) Go see the 'What The Hell Did I Just Watch?' Comedy Video Festival, an anti-film festival whose sole purpose is to make you laugh. The choice, my friend, is clear.

At 7:30pm and again at 8:45pm on July 11th the 'What The Hell Did I Just Watch?' comedy video festival will showcase several small video sketches, short films, and television pilots from around the world at the Rendezvous Jewel Box Theater in downtown Seattle.

Featuring video comedy from around the world, showcasing professionals, amateurs, and everything in-between, the 'What The Hell Did I Just Watch?' Comedy Video Festival is dedicated to showing the funniest videos out there. Absurd, politically-incorrect, dark or twisted, and sometimes just plain wrong, as long as they make you laugh.

Video pieces submitted to the festival include celebrated works from SoCal Film Group, Don't Be That Guy Films, and Invisible Engine Productions. Also submitted to the fest are local Seattle talent, Black Daisy, Stev-O Ibsen, Rufus Cubed Productions, and many others. Each video in this one-hour showcase is handpicked for it's laugh factor, and nothing else.

Sponsorship for the festival is provided by Mac and Jacks Brewery and the Rendezvous Jewel Box Theater.

Audience members will be given the chance to vote for their favorite videos. The top ten choices will be podcast on iTunes and over the internet. The top voted video receives the uber-coveted audience choice award.

We hope to see you there....'ya slacker.
